Infantry Getting Ready.

The departure of the mounted organitoday fired the enthusiasm of the nearly 1.100 men of the 3d Infantry, who will start breaking camp to norrow, prior to their own departure Wednesday. Regimental orders No. 16 directed the 3d Infantry camp be "struck" 7:30 a.m. tomorrow, and that the shelter tents of which each man carries one-half, be pitched for use the last night in Camp Ordway. The kitchens are to be taken down and the sections numbered so that they may be reassembled on the border.

The 3d Infantry will march to Rosslyn for entrainment Wednesday. Each man will be assigned a seat by the section quartermasters. Two seats in the train are allowed for each three men. Officers owning horses are to cetail an

LAWYER SEEKS A WRIT AGAINST LOWER COURT

Wednesday. Regimental orders No. 16 John H. Adriaans Denies Right of Tribunal to Place Him on Trial.

> John H. Adriaans, a member of the bar, cited by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to show cause why he should not be disbarred from practice, today filed in the District Court of Appeals a petition for a writ fense to the charges, but declares that he would be put to much annoyance and unnecessary humiliation to be required to answer the allegations against him. He asserts that the court lacks jurisdiction to take cognizance of the charges preferred by the grievance committee because its power to remove or disbar a lawyer is curtailed by the law. Lawyers may be disbarred, he asserts, only when found guilty of receiving or collecting the money of a citent and refusing to pay it over on demand or after being convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude. Neither of these charges is made against him, he points) out, and the court is without jurisdiction to cite him for frial on other complaints.

Owing to the death of Justice Anderson, the disbarment proceedings in the lower court were continued until next Monday.

Attorneys T. P. Newbold, V. H. Wallace and William A. Henderson filed the petition on behalf of Mr. Adriaans.

BUILDINGS ALL REOPENED FOR THE 1916-17 PERIOD

With what is believed will prove the biggest enrollment in their history on the opening date, public schools of the District of Columbia today opened for the 1916-17 period.

No figures will be available as to the enrollment until tomorrow, but Ernest L. Thurston, superintendent of schools. predicted today that the registration would probably pass the 50,000 mark. On the opening day last year, September 20, the enrollment was 47,361.

ber 20, the enrollment was 47,361.

One of the factors making for the larger enrollment today is that the opening of schools was postponed for two weeks beyond the usual time, due to the infantile paralysis scare. A number of children who are usually entered several days late, being delayed in returning from their summer vacations, have this year returned to the city prior to the postponed date and were registered today.

This is generally supposed to be a day of gloom and sadness for the little boys and girls, but officials of the schools declare this tradition has long since been proved false.

ticularly is this true of the new buildings.

New Central probably furnished the best example of this, for it is not only a school building, but from the students point of view is also a wonderland—a wonderland in which it is easy to get temporarily lost; to lose track of the floor one is on, and forget whether he is walking toward the back or the front of the building. Yes, it is easy to lose one's sense of direction in new Central. The freshman class, which occupied a large part of the first floor of the auditofium this morning to hear Principal Emory Wilson give directions as to the courses of studies offered and other pertinent features, has not yet had a chance to learn how much of a wonderland it is. It will be weeks, probably, before the students at Central realize the vastness and the full magnificence of this, the finest school building in the District.
